

FACTS

Taxpayer is a life insurance company taxable under § 816(a) of the Internal Revenue Code and is licensed to conduct an insurance business in 49 states and the District of Columbia. Taxpayer is a wholly owned subsidiary of Parent and is a stock life insurance company organized under the laws of State. Taxpayer and its wholly owned subsidiary, Subsidiary, file a consolidated income tax return on a calendar year basis.

Taxpayer issues deferred and immediate variable annuity contracts (the "Annuities") and variable universal life insurance contracts (the "LICs"). The Annuities currently offer both x variable investment options and a fixed investment option. The LICs currently offer y investment options. Only Taxpayer can add or remove investment options under the Annuities or the LICs (the "Contracts").

The portion of a premium, less any applicable state and local taxes related to the premium (a "net premium"), allocated by the owner of an Annuity to the fixed investment option under the Annuity is held in Taxpayer's general account. The portion of a net premium allocated to the variable investment options under an Annuity is held in a separate account (the "Annuity Separate Account"), which is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") as a unit investment trust under the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "1940 Act"). The portion of a net premium allocated to the variable investment options under a LIC is held in a separate account (the "Life Separate Account"), which is registered with the SEC as a unit investment trust under the 1940 Act. The assets of the sub-accounts of the Life Separate Account are held by Taxpayer separately from the assets of the sub-accounts of the Annuity Separate Account.

Taxpayer will offer LICs with the same investment options as the current investment options under the Annuities. These investment options correspond to sub-accounts (the "Existing Sub-Accounts") of the Life Separate Account or the Annuity Separate Account. Taxpayer represents that, except as otherwise permitted by § 1.817-5(f)(3), all the beneficial interests in each of the Existing Sub-Accounts are held by one or more insurance companies and public access to each of the Existing Sub-Accounts are available exclusively through the purchase of a variable contract. Taxpayer represents that the Existing Sub-Accounts are adequately diversified within the meaning of § 817(h) and § 1.817-5(b). Taxpayer also represents that the owners of the Contracts do not possess investment control and sufficient other incidents of ownership over the assets in the Existing Sub-Accounts to be considered the owner of those assets for federal income tax purposes.

Taxpayer will establish investment portfolios ("Portfolios") that will present new investment options under the Contracts. Taxpayer will establish new sub-accounts

(“New Sub-Accounts”) of the Annuity Separate Account and Life Separate Account. Each New Sub-Account will correspond to and invest in a Portfolio. Each Portfolio will be a series of the Fund. The Fund is a Massachusetts business trust registered with the SEC under the 1940 Act as an open-end management investment company. Each Portfolio will be a regulated investment company as defined in § 851 (“RIC”), will be taxable as a separate corporation under § 851(g), and will be registered with the SEC under the 1940 Act as an investment company. Shares of each Portfolio will be registered with the SEC under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and, except as otherwise permitted by § 1.817-5(f)(3) of the Income Tax Regulations, will be available only to one or more segregated asset accounts of one or more insurance companies for the purpose of funding variable annuity and life insurance contracts.

Each Portfolio will represent a different investment strategy. Taxpayer will establish four Portfolios representing conservative, moderately conservative, moderate, and aggressive investment strategies. Each Portfolio will invest in a targeted mix of underlying equity, bond, and money market RICs that is consistent with the corresponding investment strategy. Portfolios will consist of assets chosen from among  $\geq$  RICs (the “Portfolio Assets”). The Portfolio Assets are available to investors other than through the purchase of a variable contract. All Portfolio Assets are RICs that are managed by Company X or its affiliates. Company X is an affiliate of Taxpayer and is a wholly owned subsidiary of Parent. Taxpayer represents that no more than 55 percent of the value of the total assets of any Portfolio will be represented by any one Portfolio Asset, no more than 70 percent by any two Portfolio Assets, no more than 80 percent by any three Portfolio Assets, and no more than 90 percent by any four Portfolio Assets.

The specific Portfolio Assets held by each Portfolio will be determined by an investment manager (“Investment Manager”), and will be subject to change at any time. Other than a Contract owner’s ability to allocate premiums and transfer dollars among the various Portfolios, all investment decisions regarding the Portfolios will be made by the Investment Manager in its sole and absolute discretion. A Contract owner will not be able to direct a Portfolio’s investment in any particular Portfolio Asset, and there will be no agreement or plan between Taxpayer and a Contract owner, or between the Investment Manager and a Contract owner, regarding such an investment.

A Contract owner will have no legal, equitable, direct, or indirect ownership interest in any of the Portfolio Assets. Rather, the Contract owner will have only a contractual claim against Taxpayer to collect cash under the terms of the Contract.

REQUESTED RULING

The shares that each Portfolio issues to its corresponding New Sub-Account will be treated for federal income tax purposes as owned by Taxpayer and not by the owner of a Contract.

LAW

Section 61(a) provides that the term "gross income" means all income from whatever source derived, including gains derived from dealings in property, interest and dividends.

Section 817(d) defines a "variable contract" as a contract that provides for the allocation of all or part of the amounts received under the contract to an account that, pursuant to state law or regulation, is segregated from the general asset accounts of the company and that provides for the payment of annuities, or is a life insurance contract.

Section 817(h)(1) provides that, for purposes of subchapter L and § 7702(a) (relating to definition of life insurance contract), a variable contract (other than a pension contract), that is otherwise described in § 817 and that is based on a segregated asset account, shall not be treated as a life insurance contract for any period (and any subsequent period) for which the investments made by such account are not, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, adequately diversified.

Section 817(h)(4) provides, in certain situations, a "look-through" rule for meeting the diversification requirements. If all of the beneficial interests in a regulated investment company or trust are held by one or more (A) insurance companies (or affiliated companies) in their general account or in segregated asset accounts, or (B) fund managers (or affiliated companies) in connection with the creation or management of the regulated investment company, the diversification requirements of § 817(h) are applied by taking into account the assets held by such regulated investment company.

Section 1.817-5 are the regulations prescribed by the Secretary that set forth the diversification requirements for variable contracts. Generally, the investments of a segregated asset account will be considered to be "adequately diversified" for purposes of § 817(h) and § 1.817-5 if no more than 55 percent of the value of the total assets of the account is represented by any one investment, no more than 70 percent by any two investments, no more than 80 percent by any three investments, and no more than 90 per cent by any four investments. See § 1.817-5(b)(1).

Section 1.817-5(f)(1) provides that, if the "look-through" rule applies, a beneficial interest in an investment company, partnership, or trust will not be treated as a single investment of the segregated asset account. Instead, a pro rata portion of each asset of the investment company, partnership, or trust is treated, for purposes of § 1.817-5, as an asset of the segregated asset account.

Section 817 was enacted by Congress as part of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (Pub. L. No. 98-369) (the "1984 Act"). In the legislative history of the 1984 Act,

Congress expressed its intent to deny annuity or life insurance treatment to any variable contract if the assets supporting the contract include funds publicly available to investors:

The conference agreement allows any diversified fund to be used as the basis of variable contracts so long as all shares of the funds are owned by one or more segregated asset accounts of insurance companies, but only if access to the fund is available exclusively through the purchase of a variable contract from an insurance company. . . . In authorizing Treasury to prescribe diversification standards, the conferees intend that the standards be designed to deny annuity or life insurance treatment for investments that are publicly available to investors . . .

H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 98-861, at 1055 (1984).

Approximately two years after enactment of § 817(h), the Treasury Department issued proposed and temporary regulations prescribing the minimum level of diversification that must be met for an annuity or life insurance contract to be treated as a variable contract within the meaning of § 817(d). The preamble to the regulations stated as follows:

The temporary regulations . . . do not provide guidance concerning the circumstances in which investor control of the investments of a segregated asset account may cause the investor, rather than the insurance company, to be treated as the owner of the assets in the account. For example, the temporary regulations provide that in appropriate cases a segregated asset account may include multiple sub-accounts, but do not specify the extent to which policyholders may direct their investments to particular sub-accounts without being treated as owners of the underlying assets. Guidance on this and other issues will be provided in regulations or revenue rulings under section 817(d), relating to the definition of variable contracts.

51 FR 32633 (Sept. 15, 1986). The text of the temporary regulations served as the text of proposed regulations in the notice of proposed rulemaking. See 51 FR 32664 (Sept. 15, 1986). The final regulations adopted, with certain revisions not relevant here, the text of the proposed regulations.

A long standing doctrine of taxation provides that “taxation is not so much concerned with the refinements of title as it is with actual command over the property taxed--the actual benefit for which the tax is paid.” Corliss v. Bowers, 281 U.S. 376 (1930). The incidence of taxation attributable to ownership of property is not shifted if the transferor continues to retain significant control over the property transferred, Frank Lyon Company v. United States, 435 U.S. 561 (1978); Commissioner v. Sunnen, 333

U.S. 591 (1948); Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U.S. 331 (1940), without regard to whether such control is exercised through specific retention of legal title, the creation of a new equitable but controlled interest, or the maintenance of effective benefit through the interposition of a subservient agency. Christoffersen v. U.S., 749 F.2d 513 (8th Cir.), rev'g 578 F. Supp. 398 (N.D. Iowa 1984).

Rev. Rul. 77-85, 1977-1 C.B. 12, considers a situation in which the individual purchaser of a variable annuity contract retains the right to direct the custodian of the account supporting that variable annuity to sell, purchase, and exchange securities or other assets held in the custodial account. The purchaser also is able to exercise an owner's right to vote account securities either through the custodian or individually. The Service concludes that the purchaser possesses "significant incidents of ownership" over the assets held in the custodial account. The Service reasons that if a purchaser of an "investment annuity" contract can select and control the investment assets in the separate account of the life insurance company issuing the contract, then the purchaser is treated as the owner of those assets for federal income tax purposes. Thus, any interest, dividends, or other income derived from the investment assets is included in the purchaser's gross income.

In Rev. Rul. 80-274, 1980-2 C.B. 27, the Service, applying Rev. Rul. 77-85, concludes that, if a purchaser of an annuity contract can select and control the certificates of deposit supporting the contract, then the purchaser is considered the owner of the certificates of deposit for federal income tax purposes. Similarly, Rev. Rul. 81-225, 1981-2 C.B. 12, concludes that investments in mutual fund shares to fund annuity contracts are considered to be owned by the purchaser of the annuity if the mutual fund shares are available for purchase by the general public. Rev. Rul. 81-225 also concludes that, if the mutual fund shares are available only through the purchase of an annuity contract, then the sole function of the fund is to provide an investment vehicle that allows the issuing insurance company to meet its obligations under its annuity contracts and the mutual fund shares are considered to be owned by the insurance company. Finally, in Rev. Rul. 82-54, 1982-1 C.B. 11, the purchaser of certain annuity contracts can allocate premium payments among three funds and has an unlimited right to reallocate contract value among the funds prior to the maturity date of the annuity contract. Interests in the funds are not available for purchase by the general public, but are instead only available through purchase of an annuity contract. The Service concludes that the purchaser's ability to choose among general investment strategies (for example, between stock, bonds, or money market instruments) either at the time of the initial purchase or subsequent thereto, does not constitute control sufficient to cause the contract holders to be treated as the owners of the mutual fund shares.

In Christoffersen v. U.S., the Eighth Circuit considered the federal income tax consequences of the ownership of the assets supporting a segregated asset account. The taxpayers in Christoffersen purchased a variable annuity contract that reflected the investment return and market value of assets held in an account that was segregated from the general asset account of the issuing insurance company. The taxpayers had the right to direct that their premium payments be invested in any one of six publicly traded mutual funds. The taxpayers could reallocate their investment among the funds at any time. The taxpayers also had the right upon seven days notice to withdraw funds, surrender the contract, or apply the accumulated value under the contract to provide annuity payments. The Court of Appeals held that the taxpayer, not the insurance company that issued the annuity contract, owned the mutual fund shares for Federal income tax purposes. Thus, the taxpayers were required to include in gross income any gains, dividends, or other income derived from the mutual fund shares.

In Rev. Rul. 2003-91, 2003-33 I.R.B. 347, a variable contractholder does not have control over segregated account assets sufficient to be deemed the owner of the assets. The variable contracts at issue are funded by a separate account that is divided into 12 sub-accounts. The issuing insurance company can increase or decrease the number of sub-accounts at any time, but there will never be more than 20 sub-accounts available under the contracts. Each Sub-account offers a different investment strategy. Interests in the sub-accounts are available solely through the purchase of a Contract. The investment activities of each sub-account are managed by an independent investment advisor. There is no arrangement, plan, contract, or agreement between the contractholder and the issuing insurance company or between the contractholder and the independent investment advisor regarding the availability of a particular sub-account, the investment strategy of any sub-account, or the assets to be held by a particular sub-account. Other than a contractholder's right to allocate premiums and transfer funds among the available sub-accounts, all investment decisions concerning the sub-accounts are made by the issuing insurance company or the independent investment advisor in their sole and absolute discretion. A contractholder has no legal, equitable, direct, or indirect interest in any of the assets held by a sub-account but has only a contractual claim against the issuing insurance company to collect cash in the form of death benefits or cash surrender values under the contract. The Service concludes that based on all the facts and circumstances, the contractholder does not have direct or indirect control over the separate account or any sub-account asset, and therefore the contractholder does not possess sufficient incidents of ownership over the assets supporting the variable contracts to be deemed the owner of the assets for federal income tax purposes.

Rev. Rul. 2003-92, 2003-33 I.R.B. 350, concludes that a variable contractholder is the owner of interests in a nonregistered partnership where interests in the nonregistered partnership are not available exclusively through the purchase of a variable contract.

ANALYSIS

The determination of whether the owner of a Contract possesses sufficient incidents of ownership over New Sub-Account assets to be deemed the owner of the assets depends on all of the relevant facts and circumstances.

All investment decisions regarding the Portfolios will be made by the Investment Manager in its sole and absolute discretion. A Contract owner will not be able to direct a Portfolio's investment in any particular Portfolio Asset, and there will be no agreement or plan between Taxpayer and a Contract owner, or between the Investment Manager and a Contract owner, regarding such an investment.

The investment strategies of the New Sub-Accounts currently available are sufficiently broad to prevent the owner of a Contract from making particular investment decisions through investment in a New Sub-Account. Only Taxpayer can add or remove investment options under the Contracts.

Shares of each Portfolio will be available only to one or more segregated asset accounts of one or more insurance companies or to investors described in § 1.817-5(f)(3) for the purpose of funding variable contracts. Thus, Portfolio shares are not sold directly to the general public.

Based on all the facts and circumstances, a Contract owner does not have direct or indirect control over the Separate Account or any sub-account asset. Taxpayer represents that the owners of the Contracts do not possess investment control and sufficient other incidents of ownership over the assets in the Existing Sub-Accounts to be considered the owner of those assets for federal income tax purposes. The owner of a Contract will not be treated as the owner of the investments underlying the Contract by reason of the addition of the four Portfolios. Therefore, the shares that each Portfolio issues to its corresponding New Sub-Account will be treated for federal income tax purposes as owned by Taxpayer and not by the owner of a Contract. So long as the LICs and Annuities continue to satisfy the diversification requirements of § 817(h) and Taxpayer's and Contract owner's future conduct is consistent with the facts of this ruling request, the Contract owner will not be required to include the earnings on the assets held in the New Sub-accounts in income under § 61(a).
