AS A PERSON WITH A DISABILITY, you may qualify for some of the following tax deductions, income exclusions, and credits. More detailed information may be found in the IRS publications referenced.

Standard Deduction: If you are legally blind, you may be entitled to a higher standard deduction on your tax return. See IRS Publication 501

Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC): is a tax credit for certain people who work and have low earned income. A tax credit usually means more money in your pocket. It reduces the amount of tax you owe. The EITC may also give you a refund.

Many working individuals with a disability that have no qualifying children, who are at least 25 years of age but under 65 years of age, qualify for EITC. Earnings for EITC purposes can include disability benefits you receive from your employer’s disability retirement plan, until you reach minimum retirement age.

EITC has no effect on certain public benefits. Any refund you receive because of the EITC will not be considered income when determining whether you are eligible for the following benefit programs, or how much you can receive from these programs. However, if the amounts you receive are not spent within a certain period of time, they may count as an asset (or resource) and affect your eligibility.

• Medical and Supplemental Security Income (SSI).
• Food stamps.
• Low-income housing.

Temporary assistance for needy families (TANF) benefits may be affected. Please check with your state. See IRS Publication 501

Child or Dependent Care Credit: You may be able to claim this credit for care your qualifying child or qualifying relative needs to work or attend school. You may also be able to claim business expenses for attendant care at your workplace and other expenses in connection with your workplace that are necessary for you to work. See IRS Publication 525

Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) and Supplemental Security Income (SSI): You may be able to claim business expenses for attendant care at your workplace and other expenses in connection with your workplace that are necessary for you to work. See IRS Publication 501

Impairment-Related Work Expenses: If you are an employee and have a physical or mental disability that functionally limits your employment, you may be able to claim business expenses for attendant care at your workplace and other expenses in connection with your workplace that are necessary for you to work. See IRS Publication 525

Credit for the Elderly or Disabled: You may be able to claim this credit if you are 65 or older or if you are under 65 and you retired on permanent and total disability. See IRS Publication 524

Medical Expenses: are the costs of diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease, and the costs for treatments affecting any part or function of the body. They include the costs of equipment, supplies, and diagnostic devices needed for these purposes. They also include dental expenses. See IRS Publication 502
